Backstory Emerges in Bombing

Source: Older sibling was dominant force behind the attack

Boston

The Boston area held funerals for two of its dead Tuesday as more details emerged about how the two Boston Marathon bombing suspects may have been swayed by a radical, anti-American strain of Islam.

In Washington, Senate Intelligence Committee member Richard Burr, R-N.C., said after his panel was briefed by law enforcement officials that there is "no question" that older brother Tamerlan Tsarnaev was "the dominant force" behind the attacks and that the brothers had apparently been radicalized by material on the Internet rather than by contact with militant groups overseas.

as investigators continued building their case against the 19-year-old college student. He could face the death penalty after being charged Monday with joining forces with his brother, now dead, in setting off the bombs that killed three people.

Funerals were held Tuesday for Martin Richard, 8, the youngest of those killed in the April 15 blasts, and for Massachusetts Institute of Technology police officer Sean Collier, who authorities said was shot by the Tsarnaev brothers April 18.

Two U.S. officials speaking on condition of anonymity Tuesday said that Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26 — who died last week in a gunbattle with police — frequently looked at extremist websites, including Family members said Tamerlan was steered toward a strict strain of Islam under the influence of a Muslim convert named Misha. After befriending Misha, Tamerlan began opposing the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, according to family members, who said he turned to websites and literature claiming the CIA was behind 9/11.

Charges Are Dropped Against Ricin Suspect

FBI searches home of a second man in case of toxic letters

Charges were dropped Tuesday against the Mississippi man accused of sending ricin-laced letters to President Barack Obama and others, while authorities searched another man's home in connection with the case.

In Tupelo, law enforcement officers converged on the home of Everett Dutschke, who has maintained his innocence and says he doesn't know anything about the ingredients for ricin. Dutschke said that he knows Curtis but that the two had a falling out.

Suspect: No Plot Against Canada

Al-Qaeda-influenced plan targeted train to NYC, officials say

Toronto

A man accused of plotting with al-Qaeda members in Iran to derail a train in Canada rejected the charges Tuesday, saying that authorities were basing their conclusions on appearances. Law enforcement officials in the U.S. said the target was a train that runs between New York City and Canada.

Canadian investigators say Raed Jaser, 35, and his suspected accomplice, Chiheb Esseghaier, 30, received guidance — but no money — from members of al-Qaeda in Iran. Iran released a statement saying it had nothing to do with the plot, even though there were no claims in Canada that the attacks were sponsored directly by Iran.

But the case raised questions

Three Questions: A Complicated History

Tehran on Tuesday denied any role in an alleged Canadian terror plot influenced by al-Qaeda operatives in Iran. Here's a look at Iran's ties to al-Qaeda:

1. Are Iran and al-Qaeda allies?

Relations have always been rocky. Iran has been at odds with al-Qaeda on many fronts. A fundamental divide is over the two main branches of Islam: Iran is mostly Shiite, and al-Qaeda is nearly exclusively Sunni-led.

2. Has Iran helped the West identify al-Qaeda fugitives?

To some extent, yes. In 2003, Iran gave the U.N. Security Council the names of 225 al-Qaeda suspects detained and deported after illegally entering Iran. Iran's offers of cooperation with Washington came to a halt after being named in 2002 as part of President George W. Bush's "axis of evil."

3. Could al-Qaeda operatives in Iran have a role in coordinating an attack in the West without Tehran's knowledge?

In the past, Iran kept a very close eye on all al-Qaeda figures in the country. But Tehran's apparent loosening of restrictions on al-Qaeda operatives within the country, however, raises new questions. (AP) about the extent of Shiite-led Iran's relationship with the predominantly Sunni Arab terrorist network. It also renewed attention on Iran's complicated history with the terror group, which ranges from outright hostility to alliances of convenience and even overtures by Tehran to assist Washington after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Charges against the two men include conspiring to carry out an attack and murder people in association with a terrorist group.

Police said it was the first known attack planned by al-Qaeda in Canada.

Law enforcement officials in New York said the attack was to take place on the Canadian side of the border.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said Tuesday that Canada has kept New York posted on the investigation.

Officials were first warned of the attack by an imam in Toronto, who in turn was tipped off by suspicious behavior on the part of one of the suspects.

In a court appearance in Montreal, Esseghaier declined to be represented by a court-appointed lawyer. He made a statement in French in which he called the allegations against him unfair.

"The conclusions were made based on facts and words which are only appearances," he said.

Jaser appeared in court earlier Tuesday in Toronto and also did not enter a plea. BENJAMIN SHINGLER AND ROB GILLIES (AP)

Israel: Chemical Attacks in Syria

Tel Aviv, Israel

Two senior Israeli military officials asserted Tuesday that forces loyal to Syrian President Bashar Assad have deployed chemical weapons that killed dozens of rebel fighters and civilians, saying their evidence — including photographs of victims foaming at the mouth — made them "very close to 100 percent sure."

It was the most direct and public claim by Israel that Syria has resorted to chemical weapons, which would mark a steep escalation in a brutal civil war that has stretched on for more than two years. Coming less than a week

Meanwhile ...

Two influential Lebanese Sunni clerics this week called on their community to wage "holy war" in Syria to defend their brethren. They accused Lebanon's Shiite Hezbollah of sending fighters to attack Syrian Sunnis, who make up the backbone of that country's rebellion. On Tuesday, around two dozen men in Sidon signed up to join the jihad. (AP) after France and Britain made similar assertions to the U.N., the official remarks from a close U.S. ally add to mounting international pressure on the U.S. to intervene.

Brig. Gen. Itai Brun, chief of the research division of Israel's army intelligence branch, did not, however, offer any evidence — photographs, toxicology, analysis of residue — to bolster his claims.

Secretary of State John Kerry, who is in Brussels for meetings on Syria, said he spoke to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu by phone Tuesday morning and Netanyahu "was not in a position to confirm" the Israeli military's assessment.

President Barack Obama has warned the Assad regime that the use of chemical weapons would represent "a red line" that could lead to U.S. military intervention in the Syrian war. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Former teacher held without bond, faces child porn charges

Washington

After being spotted by a sharp-eyed tourist in Nicaragua, fugitive Eric Justin Toth was back in D.C. on Tuesday facing child pornography charges, including an accusation he shot explicit video of a young boy at Washington National Cathedral's Beauvoir elementary school.

Toth met the tourist, who recognized him from media coverage, at a "social engagement" on April 18 in Nicaragua, said Valerie Parlave, assistant director in charge of the FBI's Washington Field Office. He was taken into custody by Nicaraguan authorities Saturday.

Toth — a former third-grade teacher at Beauvoir — first came to police attention in 2008, when school employees discovered a camera assigned to him with 68 pic-even faked his own suicide to elude police. In 2009, someone in Phoenix recognized him from the TV show "America's Most Wanted," but Toth vanished before officers arrived.

Nicaraguan police said he had been living in Esteli, Nicaragua, under the alias of Texan Robert Shaw Walker, with a forged American passport and falsified U.S. license and credit cards. He had been in Nicaragua on and off since October 2012, allegedly at times working with youth, police said.

Tall and lanky, Toth is recognizable by a mole under his left eye. Nicaraguan police said in a news release that he hid the mole by wearing an eye patch in public.

In federal court on Tuesday, Toth was ordered held without bond during a hearing. He is facing two charges: production of child pornography and possession of child pornography. If convicted on both counts, he could face 15 to 50 years in prison. ALLISON KLEIN AND JUSTIN JOUVENAL (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Off-Duty Cop Fatally Shot By Stepson, Police SayUpper Marlboro, Md.

Police are searching for a Prince George's County man accused of fatally shooting his stepfather, a D.C. police officer, after the officer asked him to do yard work.

Police say Antwan Rayvon James, 27, shot 46-year-old Joseph Burrough Newell on Monday night at the home they shared in the 6700 block of Green Moss Drive in Upper Marlboro.

Newell asked James to put fertilizer on the lawn, then went outside. When James' mother later yelled at her son to help his stepfather, the young man responded, "Oh, yeah? Watch this," according to officials and court records.

James then went outside and shot Newell — who was off duty at the time of the shooting and a 24-year veteran of the District's police force — in the back, authorities said. After the D.C. officer fell to the ground, authorities said, his stepson stood over top of him and continued to fire.

Kevin Davis, Prince George's assistant police chief, said James used a handgun — not his stepfather's service weapon — in the crime, and detectives have not yet recovered it.

They believe James, a former D.C. firefighter, is still in the area and possibly armed with the weapon. PETER HERMANN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Arlington Streetcars Not Deterred

County officials plan to continue project despite feds' rejection

Arlington

Federal officials turned down Arlington County's application for a national transportation program that could have expedited approval for a much-sought streetcar project. Authorities doubted the Columbia Pike system could be built for the estimated $250 million.

According to a 96-page report from the Federal Transit Administration dated April 12, the almost five-mile-long streetcar line likely would cost closer to $310.1 million and as much as $402.4 million, including $71.8 million in contingency funds — double what county officials had predicted.

Arlington County officials said Tuesday that although they were disappointed they didn't qualify for the federal Small Starts program, the decision actually frees them to apply for another federal program that could bring more than the $75 million they sought.

In fact, the decision provides a roadmap for how to apply for the New Starts program, which serves as the primary financial resource for local transit programs.

"This will help us rethink how we're doing or add to how we're thinking," said county manager Barbara Donnellan. "This puts us in a much better place to be ready."

The long-planned streetcar line, from the Skyline area of Fairfax County to the Pentagon area, does not rely solely on federal funds. The project foresees using at least $35 million in state funds and $35 million from Fairfax County in a mix of state and local funds. Arlington's $104 million contribution would come from a commercial and industrial real-estate tax that can only be used for transportation.

Arlington officials said the transit administration's denial won't slow the county's progress on planning, which is about 90 percent done, or the construction, which has yet to begin.

The Nats' Next Big Thing?

Rendon gets his 1st chance in the big leagues with Zimmerman out

Nationals

Anthony Rendon is the Nationals' newest hot prospect, following in the footsteps of the likes of Ryan Zimmerman, Stephen Strasburg and Bryce Harper.

But Rendon doesn't exactly have to live up to the same kind of expectations that those three All-Stars faced upon their arrival to the big leagues. Manager Davey Johnson doesn't even expect to keep the 22-year-old in the majors once Zimmerman, who was placed on the 15-day disabled list with a left hamstring strain on Saturday, is healthy enough to return.

"I don't care if he hits .900, he's not going to beat out Ryan Zimmerman," Johnson said.

Rendon isn't letting his uncertain future get in the way of trying to convince Johnson he's capable of staying at the big league level.

"I have to go out there and play my game," Rendon said. "If it works out, it works out. If it doesn't, then what can you do?"

The infielder was Washington's sixth overall pick in the 2011 MLB draft and spent the 2012 season in the minor leagues. He batted through injuries and hit .233 with six home runs and 12 RBIs in just 43 games.

He opened the 2013 season with Double-A Harrisburg, where he hit .292 with two home runs and seven RBIs in the first 14 games before getting called up.

Not Going To His Head

When you're brought up from the minors for a brief stint, sometimes you end up with equipment that doesn't fit you quite right. That was possibly the case for Anthony Rendon, who lost his helmet on a particularly hard swing Monday. The Nats infielder laughed as he returned his helmet to its rightful place, and then got his first major league hit on the next pitch. "That's the one thing you're going to cherish for the rest of your life," Rendon said after the game. "You don't get another one. The second one doesn't count as much as the first one."

little time in minor league experience, he's a good player," Zimmerman said. "He has a chance to be really good."

Rendon, who's used to playing in front of crowds as small as 100 people, is still getting a feel for what it's like to play baseball at the highest level. He has started all three games at third base since coming to Washington.

"It's still the same game. You try not to take it out of context too much."

— ANTHONY RENDON

After going 0-for-4 in his MLB debut, Rendon got his first major league hit and RBI on Monday against the Cardinals. He sent a line drive to right center that went for a double and drove in a run.

The change in scenery hasn't changed Rendon's approach, though.

"The bases are still 90 feet [apart]," he said. "The fences are relatively the same size. It's still the same game. You try not to take it out of context too much."

While his manager isn't ready to give Rendon a permanent spot on the 25-man roster, the prospect seems to have convinced at least one of his teammates that he belongs.

"He deserves to be up here, I believe," said Harper, who at 20 is the only player on the Nationals' roster younger than Rendon. "He's a great hitter and has a great head on his shoulders." JASON BUTT (FOR EXPRESS)

After spending a full season with the Lakers, Mike Brown was fired by Los Angeles just five games into this season. He has agreed to become the Cavaliers' new coach.

Brown Back in Cleveland

Coach took Cavaliers to the playoffs all 5 seasons at the helm

NBA

Mike Brown and the Cavaliers are getting back together.

Brown, who led the Cavs to the playoffs in all five seasons he coached them from 2005 to 2010, has agreed in principle to a contract to return as their coach, a person with knowledge of the situation told the Associated Press on Tuesday.

Brown had not yet signed his new deal, but has agreed to take the job, according to the person who spoke on condition of anonymity because negotiations were ongoing.

Meanwhile ...

The Bobcats fired coach Mike Dunlap Tuesday after a single season. Charlotte went 21-61 under Dunlap, finishing with the second-worst record in the NBA ahead of only the Orlando Magic. The Bobcats won just seven games in the lockout-shortened 2011-12 season, but tripling last year's victory total and a three-game winning streak to close the season weren't enough to save Dunlap's job. Bobcats president Rod Higgins said he and general manager Rich Cho met with players and Dunlap before approaching owner Michael Jordan and asking him to make a coaching change. (AP)

The sides were working through the length of the deal and other matters, but Brown's back with the team he guided to its greatest successes.

Brown went 272-138 and went to the playoffs every season with the Cavs, teaming with LeBron James on a run to the NBA Finals in 2007. He was fired by owner Dan Gilbert after the Cavs lost to Boston in the 2010 Eastern Conference semifinals, shortly before James decided he was leaving Cleveland as a free agent.

Brown spent a full season with the Lakers but was fired by Los Angeles five games into this season.

The Cavs have been without a coach since firing Byron Scott last week following his third-straight losing season.

One of the main factors in Brown's decision to come back to Cleveland was that he had already planned to move his family back to the area, long before Scott was fired. Brown is also close friends with Cavaliers general manager Chris Grant.

Brown met with Gilbert and Grant on Sunday in Detroit and negotiations intensified. Gilbert reached out to a few other high-profile coaches, including Phil Jackson. But Jackson had no interest and the search quickly zeroed in on Brown, who was the only candidate to be interviewed. TOM WITHERS (AP)

A Big Leap for George: Indiana forward Paul George was honored Tuesday as the NBA's most improved player. The announcement came less than a week after the 6-foot-9 forward finished his breakthrough regular season and less than 48 hours after he became only the second player in franchise history to record a triple-double in the NBA playoffs. He had 23 points, 11 rebounds and 12 assists in the Pacers' 107-90 Game 1 win over Atlanta. (AP)

Rutgers Introduces Jordan as New Coach

Rutgers introduced Eddie Jordan as its new men's basketball coach Tuesday, turning to a name from the school's past as it seeks to move forward from a scandal that forced the firing of coach Mike Rice and the resignation of athletic director Tim Pernetti. Jordan played for the Scarlet Knights from 1973 to 1977 and was a member of their 1976 Final Four team. (AP)

1 Show Me a Quarterback

Will any quarterbacks be taken in the first round? Possibilities include Geno Smith, above, Matt Barkley and EJ Manuel, but this is far from the glamour year of 2012, when QBs were huge. The last time no quarterback was taken in round one was 1996 (Tony Banks was a second-rounder, No. 42, by the Rams).

2 Family Ties

Some players with family ties to the NFL who are draft-eligible this year include Nate Montana (son of Joe Montana), Jordan Rodgers (brother of Aaron Rodgers) and Duron Carter (son of Cris Carter).

GETTY IMAGES

Picky About Draft Viewing

Since 1936, the NFL has picked the best of college football to join the pro league. From the very first selection — Jay Berwanger, who also was the first bust, never playing a down in the NFL — to last year's No. 1, Andrew Luck, the draft has always offered intrigue for teams and fans. Here are 10 things to watch for during the three-day NFL draft beginning Thursday (first round, 8 p.m., ESPN). RICHARD ROSENBLATT (AP)

3 Commissioner Huggy Bear

How many hugs can Roger Goodell endure from all the burly offensive and defensive players expected to be selected in the first round? Last year, there were a lot of skill players (like Robert Griffin III, left) but Goodell was nearly hugged into submission by the likes of Fletcher Cox, Dontari Poe and Melvin Ingram.

4 Fashion Statement

Fashionistas surely will be tracking the expensive, colorful designer suits, hairstyles and even socks of the draftees as they take the stage after being selected.

5 Te'o Time

When that will be is anyone's guess. Some analysts have Notre Dame's All-American linebacker Manti Te'o back to being a first-round cinch, even after a great season was marred by a poor game against Alabama followed by the hoax involving a deceased "girlfriend." He did not perform well at the NFL combine but did better at pro day in South Bend.

6 Beefing Up Early

There's a chance seven of the first 10 picks could be really big fellas. Among them are offensive linemen Luke Joeckel (306 pounds) and Eric Fisher (306); and defensive linemen Sharrif Floyd (297) and Ziggy Ansah (271).

7 Will Tide Roll Again in 1st Round?

A year ago, the national champions had four players picked in the first round. National champs again, Alabama has produced five that could end up getting drafted Thursday: offensive lineman Chance Warmack, cornerback Dee Milliner, offensive tackle D.J. Fluker, defensive tackle Jesse Williams and running back Eddie Lacy.

8 Hall of Fame Pickers

A total of 32 former NFL players will be announcing second- and third-round picks for teams, including newly elected Hall of Famers Jonathan Ogden (Ravens), Warren Sapp (Buccaneers) and Dave Robinson (Packers).

9 Comeback Stories

Houston cornerback D.J. Hayden (heart) and South Carolina running back Marcus Lattimore (knee), above, are trying to overcome serious injuries to get drafted.

10 Final Pick

As they did last year, the Colts have the honor at pick No. 254 — aka Mr. Irrelevant. The last pick will be awarded the Lowsman (opposite of Heisman) Trophy during a weeklong celebration at the Balboa Bay Club in Newport Beach, Calif.

Skill Search

This year's draft will be dominated by linemen and defenders, but here are the top receivers and running backs: (EXPRESS)

Tavon Austin

WR, West Virginia

The versatile speedster has been compared to Percy Harvin, but he's only 5 feet 8, 173 pounds. Austin's 4.34 time in the 40 greatly improved his stock.

Eddie Lacy

RB, Alabama

The 220-pounder hopes to be the third Alabama running back to go in the first round in three years. Lacy was the BCS national championship offensive MVP.

Cordarrelle Patterson

WR, Tennessee

He's big (6 feet 2, 216 pounds) and fast (4.42 second 40) — which is a nice combo for a receiver. Patterson also had 25 carries and returned kicks for the Volunteers last year.

FUNNY OR DIE

Greek Strife

Someone get Michael Shannon

a Webby — or whatever it is people get for outstanding achievements in Internet videos. The "Boardwalk Empire" actor's reading of the insane Delta Gamma sorority email that went viral last week is both the funniest and most frightening thing I've seen this week.

Even if you've read the email — in which University of Maryland student Rebecca Martinson brutally rips her sisters for, among other, unprintable things, being "awkward" and "boring" — Shannon's monologue (made for Funny or Die) is a tour de force in deranged madness played for laughs.

Ominous music plays in the background as the camera zooms in and out on Shannon's face, which grows visibly more disturbed as the f-bombs pile up.

Shannon takes Martinson's words — which, remember, are about sorority girls failing to socialize properly — very seriously, acting as if he's an evil villain addressing his minions.

The video also works as a stealth promotion for Shannon's turn as comic-book villain General Zod in June's Superman reboot "Man of Steel." If, that is, any villain can top angry sorority girl Michael Shannon.

Not Clowning Around

Will Forte's acting takes a dramatic turn, but he can't quite escape 'MacGruber'

Personalities

Putting celery in one's butt is not the traditional pathway to coveted dramatic roles and illustrious international film festivals.

But three years after the "Saturday Night Live" spinoff "MacGruber" — and that infamous moment of vegetable prop comedy — Will Forte finds himself starring in an Irish drama playing at the Tribeca Film Festival ("Run & Jump") ahead of his starring role in Alexander Payne's "Nebraska," an entry to this year's Cannes Film Festival.

"I have no idea how I found myself in this position," says a still bewildered Forte.

Though known for ridiculously over-the-top characters on "SNL" (a hermit falcon-owner, a whiskey-swilling morning talk-show band leader, a potato chip-obsessed NASA scientist), the 42-year-old comedian is more normal than you might expect.

In "Run & Jump," director Steph Green's feature debut, Forte plays an American psychologist who moves in with an Irish family (Maxine Peake plays the mother) to study and document how they adjust to living with a father (Edward MacLiam) brain-damaged from a stroke.

"It was interesting to not hide

"I'm surprisingly kind of a private person, but that's coming from a person who put celery in their butt."

'MacGruber 2': Hold the Vegetables

Will Forte still hopes to make a sequel to "MacGruber," despite its box-office failings, and says he and director Jorma Taccone have planned a rough story line. All that's left is securing funding. Just don't expect to see any celery, Forte says: "I feel like I've put my family through enough celery." (AP)

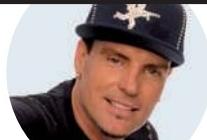

Groundlings before finding success as a comedy writer, notably for David Letterman's "Late Show." He arrived at "SNL" relatively late, at the age of 32, but stayed for eight years performing wide-ranging, bug-eyed lunatics, as well as a stint as President George W. Bush.

The "MacGyver" parody "MacGruber" helped Forte transition away from "SNL." While a box-office disappointment, earning just $8.5 million, the absurdist comedy has its cult adherents.

Green, whose 2007 short "New Boy" was Oscar-nominated, says she thought of Forte early on for her Ireland-set drama, having glimpsed from interviews that Forte was "a thoughtful, in some ways shy, self-deprecating, deep individual."

"People did think I was slightly ... they didn't think I was crazy, they knew how talented he was," Green says. "But he had not done a role like this. ... I was greeted with some funny reactions, especially in Europe. A lot of people didn't know who Will Forte was, and when they Googled him, they found a naked man with a piece of celery up his butt."

There are some things no man can escape. JAKE COYLE (AP)

Phoenix Goes for Broke

The French indie rock group keeps the hits coming on 'Bankrupt!'

Album Review

The four Frenchmen known as Phoenix continue to refine their nonpareil synthesis of dance pop and glam rock on their fifth album "Bankrupt!"

The pristinely produced record features miniature symphonies during transitions and swashes of melody that ascend on each chorus.

As polished as the music is, singer Thomas Mars' (below, far left) nonchalant voice is the band's defining element. Railing off inner monologue lyrics about Scandinavian leather, "Mint Julep testosterone," the Rosetta Stone and pesticides, his words act mostly as vehicles to sing along with.

And you'll want to. Even if nothing reaches the pure pop monstrosity of "1901" or "Lisztomania" from the group's previous album, "Wolf-gang Amadeus Phoenix," potential hits abound. Lead track "Entertainment" picks up right where those left off. "Chloroform" splits the difference between ballad and banger, a perfect tonic for drifting away while stuck in traffic. Subverting its title, "Trying to Be Cool" glides effortlessly on a floral neon groove.

Bankrupt!
Phoenix

The band's basic formula is still the same, but subtle shifts resonate. An acoustic guitar trickles through "Bourgeois"; a blizzard of synth glitter washes out the title track.

But "Bankrupt!" is mostly just Phoenix getting better at what it does: firing off populist-themed sure shots that won't get out of your head. JAKE O'CONNELL (AP)

Buble Is Stuck in The Past

Album Review

Canadian crooner Michael Bublé projects a strange dichotomy in his eighth studio album, "To Be Loved." It combines old and new, happy and blue, romance and more romance. His penchant for the golden standards, which he covers with aplomb, is what saves the record from sounding too hollow, but it's also the reason it sounds uneven.

The four originals were all co-written by Bublé, but apart from his joie de vivre and emotive voice, they fail to capture the imagination.

It's actually Bublé's love for middle 20th-century music (which he covers often) that keeps this album in the middle of the road: As an artist, it's time for Bublé to become his own man. CRISTINA JALERU (AP)

CHUNG SUN JUNG/GETTY IMAGES

"The criteria for determining the best and worst jobs were physical demands, work environment, income, stress, and hiring outlook. No wonder Clark Kent quit being a newspaper reporter."

—THE DAILY BEAST.COM/CHEATS reacts to a report released Tuesday by job website CareerCast.com that lists "newspaper reporter" as the worst job in America.

"If the tanning beds have a weight limit based on actual physical limitations then that's fine. Customers should be informed up front, in a respectful manner, before you take their money."

—LINDY WEST AT JEZEBEL.COM tries to find a solution after the report of a woman who — after she bought a monthlong package — was turned away from an Ohio tanning salon because of a policy that does not allow anyone who is more than 230 pounds to use its beds.

"The follow-up to the 2004 film which gave us the proverb 'If you can dodge a wrench, you can dodge a ball' will feature Vince Vaughn and Ben Stiller 'forced to team up to fight an even bigger threat.' Pretty vague, but hey, it's 'Dodgeball 2.' ... We'll reserve judgment until the trailer hits."

—ZACH DIONNE AT VULTURE.COM thinks the plot synopsis of the newly announced movie is lame but it might turn out well.

"Also, ladies and gentlemen, get used to this phrase: Senate Finance Chairman Ron Wyden. He's today's biggest winner."

—@PKCAPITOL thinks Sen. Wyden, D-Ore., is in line for the position after the retirement of Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., who served as Senate Finance Committee chairman.

HOROSCOPE

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Those in your inner circle may be worried about you now that you have crossed a line of some sort.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be more concerned with the money that is coming in than that which is going out — though balance is really what you should work toward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) What you envision can surely come to pass today — even if you think it is far-fetched or downright impossible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's a good day to dig deeper into a topic that has had you spellbound for some time. What you learn will surprise and impress you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) As soon as you say "no," you are likely to realize that the choices facing you are far more complicated than you had supposed. Avoid regrets!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your view of things may not be taking into account the views of others who are playing important roles in your own affairs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may not need permission to do a certain thing — it's just short of the line that should not be crossed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) What you do today will surely have been worth the trouble when you realize how much others are benefitting from it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In attempting to simplify a central issue today, you may actually be doing yourself a disservice. What is looming requires your attention.

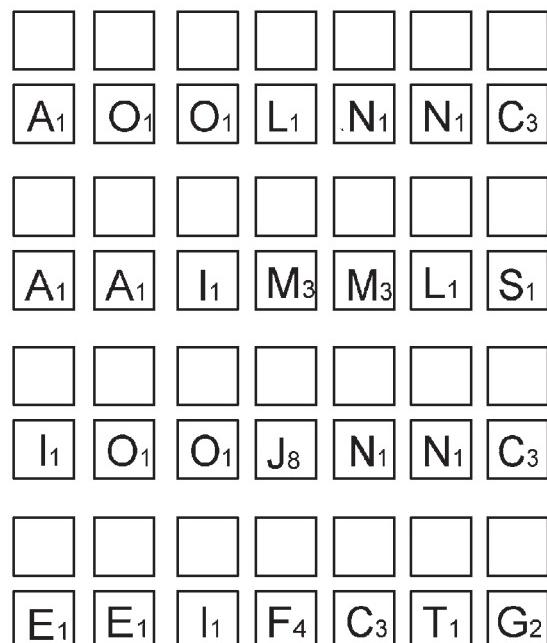

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Something is coming, and though you can't say precisely when, you can surely acknowledge that you must take certain steps — now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You can't afford any serious lapse in judgment today; what matters most is maturity, and at this time, you have an advantage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be considering a change that involves someone close to you — but he or she may not be willing to make the required sacrifices.
